Preamble

The undergraduate course in English has been designed to train the students in the subject and enable them to use the skills and disciplinary insights to critically approach literary texts in its relation to life and society at large. Woven into a coherent structure, with a wide range of disciplinary, interdisciplinary and trans-disciplinary module and themes, this course provides a solid foundation to the students who can take forward their learned skills and knowledge for or higher research in the discipline and its associated domains. Like many other knowledge domains, English also engages with relevant non literary and interdisciplinary aspects to explore the intertwined relationship between literature and life. And above all, it would produce an active, participatory, and responsible citizen that would help sensitize other members in society and disseminate a current of fresh ideas for better future in the long run.

At the very onset, students are made familiar with the art of analysing the language of English from an aesthetic point of view through the study of Rhetoric and Prosody. This intricate and interesting area of study helps them to form basic concepts about prose and verse and analyze the metrical patterns to find the encoded poetic meaning. Knowledge about various Rhetorical devices in speech enables them to use embellished and figurative language which can persuade the audience and achieve the desired impact upon the listener.

Unit I:

Rhetoric: Identification of Figures of Speech with Definition and Nomenclature

(Five questions of 2 marks each to be attempted out of eight: $2 \times 5 = 10$)

Unit II:

Prosody: Literary Passages to be scanned and metres to be described

Suggested Reading: English Rhetoric and Prosody by Bose and Sterling

(One short answer type question of 5 marks to be attempted out of two: 5x1 = 5)

Unit III:

Substance Writing (10 marks) and Critical Appreciation of Unseen Literary Passages (5+5 marks) and Comprehensive Questions to be answered (Five questions of 1 mark each to be attempted out of eight: 1x5=5)

This course is designed to enhance the ability of the undergraduate students in understanding the basics of English language and literature through reading, comprehension and writing. Some lucid and interesting prose pieces are included in the course so that the students may develop a taste for appreciating prose literature by coming across such nice examples of different styles of writing. Unseen passages would also be given to them in order to test their ability of comprehension. Besides, they are also to be trained through this course on how to compose formal letters for various official purposes. With the objective as mentioned already, this course as a blending of both literary and non-literary specimens of English would enable the students to get associated with complex compositions in the semesters to follow.

Unit I:

M K Gandhi: Voluntary Poverty

C.E.M. Joad: The Civilization of Today

Virginia Woolf: Profession for Women

This paper is designed to be taught to those candidates who are pursuing Program Course and have chosen English as one of their Core papers.

The paper contains a collection of nine poems representing the cross-section of Poetry in English from the time of Shakespeare to the early part of the 20th century. It offers to the students the flavour of the changes that have taken place in English Poetry down the Ages. It is hoped that through this offering the students would become conversant with the various changes in theme and technicalities of poetry down the ages.

1. William Shakespeare – Sonnet 73 “That time of year thou mayst in me behold”
2. William Wordsworth – “Daffodils”
3. P B Shelley – “One word is too often profaned”
4. John Keats – “To one Who has been long in city pent”
5. Alfred Tennyson – “Break, break, break”
6. Elizabeth Barrett Browning – “How Do I Love Thee? Let Me Count the Ways”
7. Thomas Hardy – The Darkling Thrush
8. Robert Frost – Nothing Gold Can Stay
9. Sarojini Naidu - Palanquin Bearers

(Five questions of 1 mark each to be attempted out of eight : $1 \times 5 = 5$)

Five questions of 2 marks each to be attempted out of eight : $2 \times 5 = 10$

This paper is designed for only those students who belong to B.A. and B.Com (Prog.) Courses. The paper has two parts.

In the first part the students are to study three short stories and it is hoped that through the study of these texts the students would be able to grasp the subtleties of English Short Stories written by some of the best short story writers of world literature written both originally written in English and also translated into English. The pattern of teaching and in the setting of questions would enhance the power of comprehension of students in reading English prose texts and in tackling relevant questions.

The second part of the paper has Report Writing and wishes to train the students in enhancing their writing skills through the practice of writing actual reports on incidents.

Reading short stories for grammatical and language comprehension:

- A) After Twenty Years- O. Henry
- B) Kabuliwala- Rabindranath Tagore
- C) The Signal Man- Charles Dickens

(Five questions of 1 mark each to be attempted out of eight: 1x5=5)

Five questions of 2 marks each to be attempted out of eight: 2x5=10

Three short answer type questions of 5 marks each to be attempted out of five: 5x3=15

This paper is to be studied by all students pursuing Program Courses in Arts, Commerce and science as an Elective Language Paper. The philosophy behind teaching this paper is to enhance the Communication skills in English of the learners. However, taking into consideration the infrastructure available in Colleges, the stress in this paper is on the development of written communication. This paper is divided into two Units.

Unit I is in the modes of communication and it is hoped that through this unit the students would become aware about the various modes and types of Communication

Unit II has practical manifestations of Unit I and it is hoped that through the Unit the students would become not only aware about the types of communication but also would become proficient in the various modes of written and verbal communication.

Unit I:

Types and Modes of Communication:

Verbal and Non-Verbal Communication

Personal, Social, and Business Communication

Group Communication

Effective Communication and Miscommunication

The basic concepts of the above should be discussed in the class.

(Five questions of 2 marks each to be attempted out of eight: $2 \times 5 = 10$)

Unit II:

Dialogue and Monologue

Group Discussion

Interview

Public Speech

Students should be engaged in practice-sessions and should be made aware of the basic techniques.

(Two short answer type questions of 5 marks each to be attempted out of three: $5 \times 2 = 10$)

Recommended Readings for Unit I and II:

- 1. Fluency in English- Part II, Oxford University Press, 2006.

Narrative texts use language to recreate experience and provide the student an opportunity to read and respond to representations of issues in contemporary life. Reading a short story or fiction serves to identify themes, plot, structure, characterisation and narrative voice. The manner in which fiction and short story uses literary devices can also be deciphered. The selection of texts is aimed to present themes and topics that are thought-provoking, insightful and informative. Such finely crafted short stories as Mansfield's The Fly or Maugham's Lotus Eaters are real pleasures in reading where distilling the true essence of plot and character is a gratifying challenge for students. One of the best known of the Sherlock Holmes novels, The Hound of the Baskervilles, is an all-time classic mystery. Such reading will engage the learners with the social and historical construction of crime along with the philosophical, psychological and social issues that are intrinsic part of fiction in general.

Unit – I (Short Stories)

1. Katherine Mansfield – The Fly
2. Somerset Maugham – Lotus Eaters
3. Joseph Conrad - The Lagoon
4. G.K. Chesterton – The Blue Cross

The B.A. Alternative English Course, designed for Program students, offers a representative selection of British Poetry. Through these texts, students get familiarized with great ideas, issues of social and cultural concern and also acquire a facility with the English language. Poetic texts of Sidney, Milton, Wordsworth, Hardy and Hopkins, where language is used in clear and striking ways, will teach students how poetic language can help them attain brevity, clarity, insight and complexity in verbal and written expression. Reading poetry to identify tone, imagery, rhythm, rhyme and use of tropes will build up argumentative interpretative capacity. The powerful healing quality of poetry, the ability of poetry to develop a connection with the reader, the improvement brought about in vocabulary and verbal dexterity through reading poems and none the less the sparkling of imagination, abstract thinking, art and creativity – are added incentives for the learners in this paper.

Selected poems from the text: Auroral Musings: An Anthology of English poetry (Pub. Orient Blackswan)

Poetry

1. “Grammar Rules” – Sir Philip Sidney
2. “On His Blindness” – John Milton
3. “A Slumber Did My Spirit Seal” – William Wordsworth

The course introduces students to, and familiarises them with, the basic concepts of language, especially Phonetics and Phonology – its characteristics, its structure and how it functions. Phonetics plays a very important role in improving our communication. The speech mechanisms clarify how language is produced. It will teach students to pronounce a particular word correctly and communicate accurately through proper word stress. A development of phoneme awareness and phonological skills will make learning, understanding and utilizing a language quite enjoyable. The second unit on Content Writing will acquaint learners with the know-how of writing advertisement, brochure and on web page. The expertise regarding maintenance of a style, in accordance with norms and standard, to grab the attention and understanding of the target recipients and convince them with factual information, is acquired by the learners through both theoretical and practical approach.

Unit I:

- Articulation Mechanism, Features of Vowels and Consonants, Consonant Clusters
- Syllabic structure , stress
- Phonetic Transcription

Gender is a defining facet of individual identity. In the present century, notions concerning gender have emerged as some of the important literary themes. The course demonstrates the relevance of gender issues to the study of literature. The possibilities offered by social gender and biological sex in terms of new ways of life, self-esteem etc are explored by female and male authors in their literary creations. Poems by Kamala Das and Sylvia Plath will help examining how literature influences the cultural and social construction of gender, through the experiences and contributions of men and especially women to society. Through an analysis of prose pieces by Begum Rokeya and Virginia Woolf, students will gain understanding of respective cultural conditions from the standpoint of gender theory. The paper intends to take the students through the various configurations and reconfigurations that decide gendered classifications such as masculinity and femininity. The study of this curriculum thus serves the study of power relationships—of how one's gender, typically the male gender, gives one a power advantage over the other. The students develop awareness of the fragile state of gender equality.

As the human race has achieved varying degrees of 'progress', the time has come to question the very idea of 'progress' itself and its manifestations in the face of a serious environmental crisis. The study of literature from an ecological perspective has recently emerged as a powerful field of research adding an important dimension to literary and cultural studies. The study of the relationship between literature and the physical environment will make students examine literary texts through "an earth-centred approach". Representative poems of Wordsworth, Hopkins and Gordon J.L. Ramel display the interconnections between both nature and culture, where the texts address nature not just as passive background but as a central presence deciding the powerful interpretations of the text itself. The paper will attempt to revisit texts generated at various ages in history with a view to understand, interrogate and re-appraise the alliance between the human and the natural world as reflected in the literature of their respective ages. Ruskin Bond's Coming Home to Dehra will make students feel to have returned to Nature along with Bond's return to his beloved Garhwal hills and the small towns and villages. Literature flavoured with ecological outlook will make learners ponder over the possibility of characterising nature-writing as a challenging new genre. Originating from the Romantic attitudes to nature, the course proceeds towards a quest for the reinstatement of nature as a beneficial creative resource in the context of modernity and urbanisation.

Unit-I (Poetry)

1. William Wordsworth: Reverie of Poor Susan
2. G.M. Hopkins: Binsey Poplars

Since the twentieth century, new discursive spaces have come up in literary texts from varied contexts in India. Within these texts, the idea of the normative is problematized. The marginal status, whether geographical, caste, gender, disability, or tribal, provide the urgency to interrogate the idea of the normative as well as constitutions of the canon. Such a pressing engagement has recently been part of literary academic analysis as well as syllabus of English departments of Indian universities. This course introduces undergraduate students to perspectives within Indian writing that will acquaint them with experiences of marginalization and social exclusion as well as an inspection of modes of literary stylistics that offer a variation from conventional practice. Students are made to approach literature through the lens of varied identity positions – the story of an awakened but suppressed Dalit consciousness in Poisoned Bread or the Dalit points of view, interests, insights and directions that grow out of their experience and their aspirations in Satyanarayana and Susie Tharu's The Exercise of Freedom: An Introduction or the voice of marginalized women in a hegemonic male society represented in Mahasweta Devi's Dhuli. Such accounts evolve in learners a fresh critical perspective and enable them to explore various forms of literary representations of marginalisation as well as writing from outside. A comprehension of the concept of social exclusion through the prescribed texts grows awareness of the different ways in which literary narratives are shaped and literature acts as a tool to negotiate and interrogate the hegemony.

Unit I

This paper will engage students from non-English studies backgrounds to analyse the language of the expressive art of cinema. Students are introduced to film theory, narrative techniques and the language of cinema through various terms and concepts related to screenplay, camerawork, sound, editing like jump, cut, parallel cinema, montage etc. Texts written by great film personalities like Satyajit Ray and Charlie Chaplin will prove insightful for prospective film makers amidst students. The relationship between text and film as well as the distinction between literary and cinematic arts is best understood through the language of film via recognition of its specific features as a medium. In ‘Film as Text’ the students, by referring to some key cinematic transformations of classical literary texts like Bibhuti Bhushan Bandyopadhyay and Rays’ ‘Pather Panchali’ and Chaplin’s ‘Modern Times’, will understand the role of literature in the development of cinema and its growing independence from the literary authority.

Effective communication is a vital skill for success in any sphere of activity from interviews, teamwork, leadership responsibilities, presentations and interpersonal relations. This is a skill that demands to be taught in a systematic manner so that students absorb the fundamentals of communication. A knowledge of the types and modes of communication will equip students with the basic theories on its various aspects and impart guidance in basic writing skills. Persuasive speaking and writing depends on clarity of thought and contextual understanding expressed through appropriate vocabulary. The competence to think critically is essential for an efficient communicator and involves an understanding of the communicative process. Therefore, a systematic study of Speaking Skills required in Group Discussion or Interview or Public Speech will prepare students to be effective at communicating successfully – in interviews, public speaking, letter writing, report writing, presentations, and inter-personal debates and conversations. A combined knowledge of both Speaking and Writing Skills will make them master the art of listening, speaking, reading and analysing. Students will also be given practical exercises of reading and writing in class to ensure a practical implementation of the theoretical knowledge acquired. Thus, an exposition to the principles of academic reading and writing will develop critical thinking skills in learners.

This paper looks at the various philosophical thoughts that have guided human civilization and which have influenced the creation of literature. This paper too has been divided into two Units.

Unit I takes up two texts by Rabindranath Tagore and the students have to study one of them. It is hoped that through these two essays the students would be able to understand the guiding philosophy of Tagorean education. The non-fictional texts thus serve as a contact point between Tagorean philosophy and literature.

Unit II offers a cross-section of fictional and poetic texts and through their study it is hoped that the students shall be able to understand and tackle the various philosophical notions that guide human life.

While studying literature the basic idea is to understand the study of literary texts. However, no student of literature can become complete until and unless he/she engages in a creative pursuit in the language in which he/she studies literature. This paper thus aims to create an environment through which students shall be able to lend voice to their creative instincts.

Unit I provides to the students the theoretical base of creative writing and engages them in the processes that guide creative writing. It is hoped that through such a theoretical study the students would become better equipped to understand what goes behind and inside a creative mind.

Unit II on the other hand gives the students an opportunity to be creative through engagements with story writing and dialogue writing.

Unit I

The opening course of English Honours deals with British poetry from Anglo-Saxon to Seventeenth Century. It is useful to students concerned with English literature in multifarious ways. Poetry gives students a healthy outlet for surging emotions. The first unit enhances their knowledge on particular aspects of the literary history of British poetry, its socio-economic background and development from its Anglo-Saxon beginnings to the Seventeenth Century through milestones like Chaucer's works, the Renaissance, Puritanism and the Civil War. A selection of an entire range of representative works of major poets of this span, comprises the second unit. It seeks to exploit the advantages of a broadly based interdisciplinary approach towards British poetry. An exploration of the poems helps gaining an idea of the development of literary conventions of British poetry through the ages, with relation to history and culture. The mystifying nature of the poems, resisting easy interpretation, offers the graduating learners an opportunity of achievement in analysis and critical reasoning. The last unit provides important information about the basics of Rhetoric and Prosody, mentoring students to appreciate poetry beyond a sentence's literal word meaning.

Unit I

Literary and Social History:

Anglo-Saxon Poetry, Norman Conquest, Middle English Poetry, Chaucer, Renaissance, Growth and Development of English Sonnet, Puritanism, Civil War.

(One question of 10 marks to be attempted out of three: $10 \times 1 = 10$)

This paper enlightens students with the major socio-economic changes like industrialization, urbanization and confrontation of Darwin's Theory of Evolution, as it develops in the Victorian Age, the influence of which the nineteenth century poems and novels were unable to escape. A study of the social and literary history of the Victorian world like the Industrial Revolution, the Reform Laws or the Pre-Raphaelite Movement, will assist in identifying the socio-economic-political contexts that inform the literature of the period. Students will here come across the poetry that is characteristic of the Victorian period – structures like the dramatic monologue – My Last Duchess of Robert Browning, celebration of the Victorian temper of high spirit, energy and resolution in Tennyson's Ulysses, poems expressing 'Crisis of Faith' like Matthew Arnold's Dover Beach etc. Students will also discover how novel grew and experimented with plot, character and perspective through reading of such representative examples of the realistic Victorian fiction as Dickens' Hard Times or Hardy's The Return of the Native. Students will decipher how Victorian novels closely followed not only the social concerns of the period like factory life and condition of workers but was also linked with the expansion of Colonialism and Capitalism.

The students are introduced to a rich and diverse literature through exploration of Indian and European classical texts in English translation. The knowledge of the eco-socio-political-cultural context of the age that produced the texts enable the students to historically situate the classical literature and diverse literary cultures from India and Europe. Natyashastra and Poetics enable to explore the central concerns of Sanskrit drama and dramatic theory respectively. They lay a foundation in Indian and European poetics, theories of representation, aesthetics, aspects of theatre etc. Selections from Ilango's Cilapattikaram, Mrichchhakatika of Sudraka, Homer's The Iliad and Sophocles' Oedipus Rex introduce students to multiple genres and forms, offering a wide-ranging perspective on the artistic, philosophical, and social concerns of classical literature. The paper teaches how to develop ability to pursue research in the field of classics. Now he/ she can appreciate the pluralistic and inclusive nature of Indian and European classical literature and their attributes along with valuing cross-cultural aesthetics.

The course aims to help students from non-English literature backgrounds to develop a vital understanding of how discourses and assumptions of gender govern and carve our very lives, experiences, emotions and choices. The course exposes students to an extensive range of literary and textual materials from diverse historical periods and contexts, so that they are able to investigate the socially-constructed nature of gendering. It will introduce students to the major critical approaches to literature that feminist theorists have devised to understand 'woman' as a single or variable entity in literature. The concept of gender as a cultural category – ideologies such as feminisms, masculinities, and transgenderism – will make students perceive the complexity of social and biological constructions of manhood and womanhood and how it is constructed in literature. Knowledge of the astonishing range of feminism in literature of all ages and culture along with the ways in which they embody a politics of resistance, is offered through writings of Begum Rokeya, Mahasweta Devi, Virginia Woolf and Sylvia Plath. There can be no better representation of female experience in literature than in such representative texts as The Degradation of Women or A Room of One's Own or poems of Plath. This course sensitizes students to gender assumptions in literary texts facilitating a comprehension of the link between the status of woman to social discrimination and social change. The learners will explore issues of women's experience, women's work, selfhood and representation in the texts prescribed.

This paper takes a look at the socio-literary aspects of the early part of the Twentieth century. The various socio-literary and socio-cultural shifts have been discussed in this paper. The paper has been divided into three Units.

Unit I takes a look at the various important socio-historical events that took place in the early part of the 20th century, somewhat as a logical extension of what has been done earlier in the paper related to the Victorian Age. At the same time this Unit wishes to bring to the students the various Social and Art Movements that took place during this time and then wishes to show to the students as to how these socio-cultural movements influenced the growth of British Literature in the early part of the 20th century. It is hoped that through such discussions on a panoramic course of events the students would have a wider vision on the literary growth of the times and the reasons behind the growth of various literary movements of the Age.

Unit II is almost an extension of Unit I and discusses the major poetic texts of the times by referring to a cross-section of poets. It is hoped that through such knowledge the students would become better equipped to understand the various nuances of poetic writing of the period.

Unit III pores into fiction. It is hoped that the theoretical paradigms of Psychoanalysis and the literary history of the growth of the Stream of Consciousness Novel technique discussed in Unit I would be understood better by reading Virginia Woolf's Mrs Dalloway. At the same time the students would be enriched by studying the short stories by two other prominent writers of the era Joyce and Conrad.

Unit I:

Literary and Social Background

Modernism and the Postmodern Turn, The World Wars, The Collapse of the Empire, Women's Movements, Psychoanalysis and the Stream of Consciousness, The uses of Myth, The Avant Garde

This course presents students to Twentieth century English and European drama, depicting the crucial role of drama in the introduction and shaping of modernity. The continent of Europe and its literature went through significant changes since the Renaissance. One should note that by the turn of the century, the European avant-garde had thoroughly modified the theatre – which at this juncture, seems to evolve into a pan-European phenomenon, with stylistic/technical innovations and thematic experimentations. The early phase of this period was dominated by realism. The radical turns away from it, soon followed. The study of masterpieces from Norway, Germany, Romania and England will acquaint the students with the European historical and cultural situation in this period and understand concepts like realism, naturalism, symbolism, expressionism, the Avant Garde, the epic theatre etc. The student can get an idea of the transformation, both in the socio-political and the literary fields across different national cultures in Europe by studying the prescribed plays.

Unit I:

Literary and Social History:

This course seeks to introduce students to the distinctive flavour of American Literature along with a broad overview of its historical development and social, cultural and critical contexts. Students will study texts against their socio-historical frameworks. A study of a wide range of poets like Longfellow, Frost, Whitman and Adrienne Rich will make students understand the depth and diversity of American poetry, with reference to the history and culture of the United States of America from the colonial period to the present. The learning experience of a memory play like The Glass Menagerie, will relate the African American experience in America to issues of illusions and dreams. Black Women's Writing can be probed into through Morrison's Beloved. The chronicle of the life of a Black woman will be studied against the panorama of the destructive legacy of slavery and the dehumanization of the African American community in the United States before and shortly after the Civil War. It will assist to consider the axes of race and gender as essential components of literary production. The students will familiarize themselves with other literary experiments of the period through prose works of Edgar Allan Poe and O' Henry. Hence a study of the American mind from Indian perspective will enrich the students' learning experience.

This paper introduces students with some of the key ideas and texts of Western literary criticism from Greco-Roman antiquity to the modern period. Students will get familiarized with the intellectual shifts in the reading of culture, language and literature. Thereafter learners can be expected to become conversant with examining the implications of ideas (e.g. mimesis or imagination), and orientations (classicism, romanticism and modernism) that have marked the history of literary criticism. The paper is drafted in such a manner that students get the opportunity to study principal concepts associated with the names of significant thinkers in this history. The paper comprises three parts – Section I dealing with concepts framed by Aristotle and Dr Johnson, Section II with Romantic criticism of Wordsworth and Keats and Section III Modern criticism of T.S. Eliot and Matthew Arnold. A learning of a wide range of literary philosophers and critics, whose works had informed and shaped the discourse of literary criticism, will strengthen the interpretative skills of learners and make it possible to apply various theoretical frameworks and concepts to literary and cultural texts.

Trans linguistic in nature, the course focuses on Indian ‘Bhasa’ texts that have been translated and adapted in English, and have thereby acquired a new exemplar. The course intends to widen its horizons through recognition of the cultural interanimations and cross fertilization between English and the ‘Bhasas’. A study of poems of Kaif Azmi, Nirendranath Chakraborty or Subramania Bharti will promote exploring the space where literary creations between languages, and cultures are revealed. An exploration of Indian subjectivities, histories and politics can be located in the prose fiction of Premchand, Ismat Chughtai and Premendranath Mitra. Ethics being an integral part of the Indian culture, an allegory to the destruction of human lives and wilful blindness to ethical values is presented in Dharamveer Bharti’s Andha Yug, which will be a happy discovery for learners. The impact of significant literary movements on Indian authors, the politics of translation and the historical trajectories of texts are worth appreciation. Students are given the scope to engage creatively in the cultural heritage of Indian literary tradition as well as develop a grip on the contemporary literary forms and issues. With the study of this course the students are certainly to get an overall view of the contribution of the notable Indian authors in building the notions of nation and nationalism.

The travel writer is an adventure lover and Travel Writing appreciates the role of travel in developing selfhood and relate it to regional, national and global identities. Travel writing is one of the most favourite, appealing and profitable genres of nonfiction. It calls for a variety of writing skills like alluring dialogue, point of view, use of factual detail, character development and scene-by-scene construction. The present course designs the social-historical-political-economic contexts of Travel Writing from regional, national and global perspectives. The course proceeds by the reading and analysis of classic travel pieces of Ibn Batuta, Mark Twain and Krishnabhabini Das which present Travel Writing as an alternative history or supplement to historical writing. An analysis of the narrative, fictional and literary devices used in travel writing, an examination of and practice with different information gathering designs, a study of the use of humour and unique voice, will engage students in a critical understanding of how a traveller's impressions change the perspectives of a place.

Unit I:

The epoch of modern literature marks the cultivation of avant-garde theory within poetry, novel and theatre, making it self-conscious, and experimental – representative of important trends, critical shifts and formal experimentations. The impact of social-historical-political-economic contexts – along with contemporary philosophy, ideas and art movements like expressionism, Marxism, the Absurd etc, reverberate in modern literature post World War II. These enriched innovations, both in form and content, bring out the different facets of human experience and literary technique. Representative texts ranging from poetry of Philip Larkin and Carol Anne Duffy to works of Samuel Beckett and William Golding justify the social-historical-political changes post World War II, marking the end of colonialism and the rise of multiculturalism and postmodernist aesthetics.

This paper brings to the students one of most interesting yet chequered phases of post-modernist history, that is, the post-colonial era. The paper brings to the students a reading of the various socio-cultural, socio-political and literary dimensions of the era. On one hand the it is hoped that by studying this paper the students shall be able to understand a part of the theoretical aspects behind the study of Post Colonial Literatures that have taken place in the erstwhile British colonies, while on the other hand the texts incorporated in this paper shall bring about a practical application of the various theoretical paradigms.

Unit I of this paper brings to the students the socio-literary background of the study of Post Colonial Literatures. Keeping in mind the vastness of the topic parts of two important seminal texts have been chosen and certain key areas of the theoretical paradigms are learnt by the students from these texts. It is hoped that these theoretical paradigms shall help the students to progress better when they graduate to their Master degree programs.

Unit II of this paper has Drama and Poetry while Unit III has fiction pertaining to Post Colonial Literatures. By studying these texts it is hoped that the learning of such texts shall enhance the overall orientation of the student and link up with further readings in the M.A. Course

This paper introduces to the students the various nuances of the critical field of Literary Theory. While studying literature today it is almost mandatory to have a critical perspective and a working knowledge of various critical theoretical paradigms is almost the way to move forward. In this context therefore the study of this paper becomes very important. The paper has been framed in such a way so that the following learning outcomes may be realized:

- Having a working knowledge of the various critical literary theories like Marxism, Feminism, Culture Studies etc.
- To create awareness among the students as to how such theories might be implemented in the reading/re-reading of various literary texts.
- To create a bridge with the M.A. course of various Universities as and when the students move forward in life.
- To equip them to handle the writing of dissertations or research papers in future.

The Partition of India is one of the most critical phases of world history. The Partition of the land was not only a political decision but also had monumental socio-cultural echoes and ramifications. In context of such political and socio-economic decision-making, literature too has responded by creating a huge corpus of work which brings to us the trauma, emotions and human factors involving the Partition of the Indian subcontinent. It is hoped that by studying this paper the following learning outcomes shall be achieved:

- Understand the human involvement of the Partition of the Indian subcontinent
- The launch an inquest into a whole new sub-genre of literature.

This paper focuses on the study of the one of the neglected sub-genres of literature. The writing of an autobiography is a most difficult art as it involves allowing the public at large to peer into the professional and private life of an individual. The study of this literary sub-genre thus can open out to the students the following learning outcomes:

- The appreciation of the life and times of individuals.
- Linking individual lives with wider socio-cultural and socio-economic concerns.
- Creating an awareness on the difficulties and strengths of this sub-genre.

This paper brings to the students the various configurations of the study of texts of two most interesting sub-genres—Science Fiction and Detective Fiction. While Science Fiction opens the mind of the individual to a world where the scientific and the imaginative cohabit, Detective Fiction takes the readers to a world of intense inquest and involves the sharpness of the individual mind. The study of these areas therefore brings to the students a wide variety of appreciation of literary texts. It is hoped that by studying these two sub-genres the students would appreciate the deeper thoughts that are involved while studying these texts and sub-genres.
